Susan COLLETT: Impluvium

Virginia BICHER

Susan COLLETT's new sculpture, Impluvium, is an unusual installation that captures the essence of a small garden or courtyard. The artist has created a series of small gardens within glass enclosures, allowing the viewer to experience the changing seasons and the natural beauty of the plants and flowers within.

Each garden is a miniature ecosystem, complete with soil, plants, and water, creating a serene and peaceful atmosphere. The sculptures are designed to mimic the natural world, with each piece featuring a unique combination of plants and flowers. The materials used are carefully selected to create a sense of balance and harmony.

Impluvium is a perfect example of the artist's ability to create art that is both aesthetically pleasing and thought-provoking. The sculptures are a testament to the beauty of nature and the importance of preserving it for future generations.

Espace Sculpture magazine – Issue 79 Spring 2007